

The current rules should stay in force. The airwaves belong to the American people, not private, profit-making corporations. Allowing businesses to own more stations or newspapers in a certain community will stifle diversity of news, opinion, and other delivery of services (entertainment). American airwaves require a diversity of opinion to serve our nation. America's strength relies on citizens being able to think for themselves.